DUMMY TAYLOR FACES BIG ST. LOUIS BATTERS

CONSTITUTION IS A WRECK OFF NEWPORT.

COPYRIGHT FRANK A. CHILD-NEWPORT R.I.

This is a photograph taken of the Columbia when she was wrecked off Newport during a trial spin.

The accident to the Constitution to-day was almost identical with the Columbia's, and the picture gives a clear idea of how the America's Cup defender looks at the present time.

While Sailing Off Newport To-Day America's Cup Defender Meets with an Accident Similar to that of the Challenger.

NEWPORT, R. I., June 4.—A disaster similar to that of the Shamrock has overtaken the crack Yankee defender of the America's Cup, the Constitution.

This was the first day the yacht used her big mainsail, and she went out this afternoon to try it.

The breeze, which was light early in the day, gradually grew stronger until it was blowing what sailors would call a "strong breeze."

Just as yachtsmen were congratulating themselves on the brilliant showing made by the Constitution, there was a more than usually strong puff of wind, and snap went the mainmast about two-thirds of the way up.

This happened at 2 o'clock, the yacht having weighed anchor for her spin at 1.30 P. M.

When the big steel tubular mast cracked the sails and top hamper came tumbling down on to the decks and over the side and the crippled defender of the nation's nautical honor drifted a helpless wreck before the wind.

When the Constitution was dismantled she was about five miles southeast of Narragansett Pier. At once two big tugboats were sent to her assistance and speedily got alongside.

It was found that no one had been injured in the accident. Nat Herreshoff was aboard and shouted out cheerily as the tugs neared her: "No one hurt."

Capt. Rhoads was in charge of the yacht. He could be seen working like a beaver with his men to clear away the wreck.

Yachtsmen are commenting on the similarity of the disasters which have overtaken both boats.

The tender Mount Morris was beside the boat in a few moments. Then the tender began steaming about picking up wreckage. At 3 o'clock she took the Constitution in tow and headed for Newport.

The collapse of the Constitution's mast was very similar to the accident which happened to the Columbia two years ago, not far from the same locality as that of to-day's occurrence.

Manager Butler Duncan was on board the Constitution to-day, but it is not known that he had any guests.

TRUNK EXPLODED; TWO HURT.—While a trunk was being transferred from a steamboat to a train here, at Atlantic Highlands, N. J., to-day an explosion occurred that shattered the trunk and badly injured Andrew Kenney and John Allstrom, who were carrying it from the boat to the train on the pier. The trunk slipped and dropped on the pier, and instantly there was a terrific explosion. The explosion completely shattered the trunk. The trunk contained a quantity of clothing and a lot of cartridges. The trunk had been shipped from New York to Seabright.

(Special to The Evening World.)
ST. LOUIS, June 4.—The Giants were treated to-day to a sample of the weather the natives of St. Louis have to endure in the summer time. It was warm yesterday, but to-day it is sizzling hot, and all of Davis's youngsters hustled out early to buy straw hats and gauze underwear. The Charley Horns squad uncorked yelps of joy when they felt the warmth of old St. Louis citizens.

"We pay day wing will soon be ready for business if this keeps up," said Roger Denter, whose kinky muscles won't allow him to pitch more than four or five innings.

"I'll be able to line 'em down to second as fast as the best of 'em," said Broadway Alec Smith.

"Hot? Why, this is a balmy spring day in this town," expostulated Kip and Nash when Christy Mathewson offered the opinion that it was pretty warm.

Stalling Hot in St. Louis.
"Say, I've seen it so hot in this burg you could fry an egg on the home plate. We had to play with cabbage leaves in our caps and they turned them on us between innings, and if you stood more than two minutes in any spot you'd blister your feet sure."

"Well, if that's the case, I'm a shirt waist chap next time we come out here," said Matty.

est lot on the circuit to bat on. It's on account of the dark fences and elevated structures back of the outfield. You can't see the ball coming up."

Doheny or Taylor To-Day.

Eddie Doheny or "Dummy" Taylor will do the club work for the Giants to-day. Taylor pitched all winter in California and he went wrong when he ran up against the cool weather in Gotham this spring. He has been the New York's losing tailer, but Manager Davis is sure he will come into form.

This morning the "Dum" and Davis had a tete-a-tete with their fingers. Taylor says the hot sun has bolted the kinks out of his pitching wing, and he may be given a chance to work to-day.

It looks now as though there will be trouble over Umpire Nash when the Giants reach Chicago. A despatch to-Horn squad uncorked yelps of joy when they felt the warmth of old St. Louis citizens.

"We pay day wing will soon be ready for business if this keeps up," said Roger Denter, whose kinky muscles won't allow him to pitch more than four or five innings.
